ALL DOES NOT DEPEND ON BORROWING SCHEME

Bankers May Not Lend Half Million But Will Discount Warrants—Chance for Small Investors.

As the situation now stands, the local banks will not lend half a million dollars to the Government, under the Depository Act of the special session, for the payment of outstanding warrants. Should, however, this attitude of the banks be maintained, the fact does not mean that the Territory is thrown back upon its financial haunches. This consolation is a tangible one, according to a full statement of the case of the Treasury given to an Advertiser reporter by Governor Carter yesterday afternoon. A conference held by the Governor with Treasurer A. J. Campbell and Messrs. Cooke, Damon, Spalding and Cooper, representing the four American banks respectively, had just been closed.

"The bankers did not want to lend any money," the Governor said. When asked whether they had thus finally decided, he answered:

"Practically they have, on the advice of their attorneys that, under the Organic Act, the Territory has not authority to borrow money to meet a casual deficit. I should like to meet their attorneys, as I think there is another phase of the situation which they have not considered.

"The bankers are, however, discounting warrants at only 2 1/2 per cent and are ready to discount at even less if it can be shown that warrants can be paid before November. That is not difficult if the system be followed of paying the highest numbered warrants first. The Treasury receipts being $100,000 a month, it will take but three months to pay all the outstanding warrants that exist today—that is, April, May and June. July ought to see everyone of the present warrants paid.

"The next $100,000 of warrants will probably be paid in August—that is, all issued in April and all of May's warrants in September or October. Then all the warrants issued after May will certainly be paid in November, those from June on.

"This refers to the whole thing," the Governor said answering a question as to whether salary warrants were included. He proceeded to say:

"It is easy for anyone to estimate just what the discount should be in order to let the bankers net 8 per cent per annum, at which rate they are probably prepared to discount warrants to an unlimited extent, as their correspondents abroad are perfectly able to rediscount the paper. Possibly competition may still further reduce the discount—it may go from 97 1/2 to 95 or even 99.

"Small investors having money stored away in trunks are waking up to the fact that they may earn something by taking up these warrants, for they have a security which has the whole Territory of Hawaii behind it, there being no longer any doubt as to the legality of the warrants.

"The Treasurer has issued a call for $50,000 of warrants and has nearly $25,000 on hand now for a second call. On these warrants the discounts are much greater than those being now made, as when they were issued people did not expect the money until November."
